The Nevada Office of the Attorney General humbly requests funding from the Contingency Account for Victims of Human Trafficking to plan and host human trafficking summits in Las Vegas, Reno and Elko to not only bring together law enforcement and prosecution to address human trafficking and sexual exploitation but to move Nevada forward in changing the culture of the entire criminal justice system statewide. We anticipate we will have 150 people representing law enforcement and prosecution in attendance in Las Vegas, 150 in Reno and 100 in Elko.

We have already received commitments from Peter Qualliotine, the co-founder of the Seattle-based Organization for Prostitution Survivors, Alex Troutead, Director of Policy and Research of Demand Abolition and Benjamin Gauen, King County Prosecuting Attorney in Washington. Alex Troteaud and Peter Qualliotine will do a joint presentation on "Who Buys Sex" and include information on best practices in sex buyer accountability and demand reduction, Benjamin Gauen will provide a presentation from the National District Attorney's Association and Nicole O'Banion will present available resources including information on the Contingency Account for Victims of Human Trafficking.

We also reached out to dignitaries including Attorney General Ford, U.S. Senator Cortez-Masto, State Assemblywoman Jill Tolles and local leaders from each of the communities to do opening remarks if we are funded for this project.

We appreciate your consideration of our request to take advantage of this incredible opportunity to create systemic change in our criminal justice system towards eliminating human trafficking and sexual exploitation in Nevada while only requesting funding for travel costs and printing of materials, as each speaker declined the possible offer of stipends for their time.

Requesting: $15,000 on the high end, will likely come in under.
